- Administrative level: Need for educational requirements? There is broad language in the existing ordinances and there may need to be more specific guidelines for educational requirements.
- One direction that is being reviewed is the number of children being supervised, the number of supervisors, and the ages of the children. There is a broad range of standards which vary by state.
- Council Member Knudson asked the members to review the ordinances currently available and make recommendations for improvement.
- Discussion was held regarding ratios between children and the number of daycare providers per household.
- Discussion was held regarding how the states were ranked in: health, safety, well being of children, frequency and type of monitoring, requirement of background checks, provider education, provider training, parent/provider communication and education, quality of learning environment, availability of learning activity and literacy opportunities, group size limitations and health and safety requirements. South Dakota was ranked 52nd in this study because the state requires regulations begin when a provider has 13 children. The next lowest rankings were: Virginia, Ohio, and Louisiana (and their regulations begin when a provider has 7 children).
- Quote from a Sioux Falls parent: "Report licensing businesses in order to protect the health and safety of the public is a governmental responsibility. Childcare is a business – children need protection. Licensing or registration encourages quality".
- Discussion was held regarding the requirements for registering a day care and the need to include more stipulations.
- The Health Department will work with the Ms. Muller to bring forward recommendations at the Public Services Committee scheduled for Monday, March 10, 2008, after the Informational Meeting adjourns.
