ITEM 5. SIOUX FALLS ARTS COUNCIL UPDATES - (Sandra Pay, Sioux Falls Arts Council representative)
   a) Cultural Plan Implementation
      Commissioner, and SFAC Board President, Sandra Pay, commented the SFAC Executive Director, Kara Dirkson, and SFAC Board recently provided a news release that lays out their organization's new action plan. This plan distinguishes it as an entity that specializes in arts coordination and public accessibility rather than a programming entity that creates arts experiences from scratch. This role is consistent with nationally recognized models for mid-size city arts councils such as Cambridge, MA and Asheville, NC which Sioux Falls is ready for. The Arts Council’s action plan emphasizes eliminating barriers to the arts for community members, facilitating communication within the arts and cultural community, assisting and sponsoring other arts organizations and, down the road, coordinating a community-wide celebratory arts event that generates tourism and related economic traffic for Sioux Falls.

First on the action plan is the creation of the SFAC Consortium which will be made up of three groups of stakeholders from the arts community: representatives from small to mid-size arts organizations and businesses, individual artists and larger anchor arts organizations.

Commission member Sandra Pay mentioned in the news release, “Our community is full of wonderful opportunities to experience arts and culture. However, the arts community lacks a collective voice that would empower it to sit at the table with civic and business organizations, and with the City of Sioux Falls. We hope to provide that.” The Arts Council’s action plan is rooted in Sioux Falls Imagined: A Cultural Plan for a Vibrant and Prosperous City, the community’s formal Cultural Plan, adopted on July 1, 2014 by the City Council. The Sioux Falls Arts Council is responsible for implementing this long-term plan which is a blueprint for economically and culturally growing our community through the arts.

Commission member Sandra Pay indicated the SFAC is supportive of the Visual Arts Commission’s efforts to initiate research and eventually engage the public on the topic of art integration, and develop a long range plan for public art in Sioux Falls. As examples of other cities art integration efforts, Sandra Pay distributed copies of an April 17, 2017 Wall Street Journal news article entitled, “Cities See the Power of Good Design for Utility Structures”. The article demonstrates how other cities (i.e: Seattle substation, New York street salt shed, Copenhagen waste to energy plant, and Toronto stormwater treatment facility) have become more creative with utilitarian facilities and integrating them with their urban surroundings. Commissioners expressed their appreciation to Sandra for providing this timely information and requested Russ Sorenson, staff liaison, to forward the article to Planning and Public Works staffs.

No further input from the public was received, and no further action was taken by the Commission on this agenda item.

a) PUBLIC ART INTEGRATION – Strategic Planning Session
Subcommittee – (Commissioners Aleta Branson, Larry Crane, Zach DeBoer)

Chairperson Ivy Oland provided a brief overview of the VAC’s Work Session III meeting to the Commission members and guests. During Work Session III, the Commission looked at defining art integration, and also reviewed the questions they have listed under the five pillars of an art integration strategy that include: Policy; Administration; Funding; Master Planning; and Maintenance and Conservation (recommended to replace “Sustainability” pillar). Initial DRAFT goals and objective statements provided by a few of the Commission members were also reviewed. Additional statements were encouraged to be submitted for subsequent review. Member Larry Crane suggested the topic of art integration topic have a nexus to and follow the adopted Cultural Plan for Sioux Falls Cultural Facilities Public Art (Section 6.1.) and any other adopted city plans.

Chairperson Ivy Oland emphasized there is much work to be done by the Commission, and suggested developing a collective work session meeting schedule at the next work session meeting.
